

MAURETANIA IN PORT AFTER HER ROUGHEST TRIP

This Time She Flies Commodore's Flag as the Flagship of Cunard Fleet.

Flying the commodore's flag of the Cunard fleet from her peak for the first time, the big Mauretania steamed into port to-day after being laid up in dry dock in England for about two months and brought a story of the roughest voyage in her brief history.

John Pritchard, who has commanded her ever since she was launched shortly after her sister ship, the Lusitania, is now the Cunard commodore, and as the flag goes with the commodore the Mauretania is the flagship. Capt. Pritchard was promoted after the retirement from the service of J. B. Watt, of the Lusitania, and the officials of the line in London asked him to take the Lusitania so that she might remain the flagship, as she holds the record for speed of 4 days and 15 hours, but Capt. Pritchard refused.

Faster Boat, He Says

"I firmly believe the Mauretania is a knot an hour faster than the Lusitania," he said. "The Mauretania has had such hard luck ever since she was launched that I have never been able to get the best speed from her, but I will do it, and before long."

The Mauretania was named after the Maure Channel lightship at 7:30 o'clock this morning and made the entire distance across in five days, two hours and two minutes, at an average speed of 23.71 knots an hour.

In a Smashing Gale

"Wednesday morning we ran into a regular oil-bombardment," said Capt. Pritchard. "There was a thunder and lightning with hurricane squalls and a heavy, highland sea. The barometer at 10 A. M. Wednesday showed 28.8, and twelve hours after there was a smashing gale blowing from west-north-west, with violent squalls. "You can imagine how violent they were when I had to slow down to fifteen knots an hour. I haven't seen such a blow for many years. The sea broke over the bridge, which is a mighty distance, fully eighty feet, above water-line—and it was afraid something would be smashed, but not a bit of damage was done. You see, the Mauretania is so long that she rides three seas at once. Instead of once in a short vessel, and this made it necessary for me to slow down in such a gale."

HURT BY FALLING STEEL

A section of steel chimney tubing fell from the top of the Hotel Lafayette, at University Place and Ninth Street, the chimney today, and in its rebound it struck Annie Dravel, a seamstress, of No. 47 Central avenue, Orange, N. J. The girl was knocked down and her left leg and two ribs were broken. She was sent to St. Vincent's Hospital and Policeman Benjamin, of the 7th Precinct, station near by, arrested the foreman of the chimney builders, Henry Strothman, for criminal negligence.

CLARICE VANCE AND HER SONGS.

The famous "Marina" song, which THE SUNDAY WORLD presents to its readers next Sunday, written by Miss Vance and introduced to the American public by Miss Clarice Vance, is one of the reigning successes of the vaudeville stage. Seldom has a popular ditty met with such universal recognition and seldom has a song of its character been so admirably interpreted by a gifted singer.

For a number of years Miss Vance has held a high position in first-class vaudeville as a vocalist. She is known as the Southern Singer. An American artist of this country with such originality.

Miss Vance began her successful career in Boston a few years ago, where she made her initial debut in a modest little variety house. But almost from her initial appearance she commanded attention.

The songs which Clarice Vance has popularized are legion. Among these may be cited such ditties as "Marina," "THE SUNDAY WORLD'S song," "You Afraid to Go Home in the Dark," "It Looks Like a Big Night," and her famous "Salome" novelty, one of the real "hits" of the season.

One of the salient characteristics of this singer's versatility is the fact that, although she has many imitators, Miss Vance never imitates others. "THE SUNDAY WORLD'S song," "Marina," partakes of the originality of her acts. Get it next Sunday. Order advance copy of next Sunday's World from newsdealer to-day.

FINN SCORES HEAD OF COURT SQUAD

"Court Belongs to People, Not to Fresh Policemen," He Declares.

Magistrate Finn, long suffering man that he is, and sorely harassed by the Police Department, took a fall out of Sergt. Walsh, of the Jefferson Market Court Squad, to-day when Walsh remembered.

Walsh stopped to-day at the gate and threatened to throw from the building a lawyer who had been regularly retained and desired to consult with a client. The lawyer, at great personal risk, ventured to shout a complaint to Magistrate Finn, who took immediate notice.

"I'm glad you appealed to me, sir," said "Batter Dan" to the lawyer. "I have noticed that this sergeant here acts as though he owned the court-house."

He seems to regard the presence of other people here as an intrusion. "Contemptuous and brutal treatment of citizens in this court has been going on too long. This court belongs to the people of New York and not to any fresh policemen. As far as I am concerned I can get along without a court squad and other Magistrates could, too. The policemen who bring prisoners here are responsible for the prisoners. The court squad is a superfluous organization which appears to occupy most of its time making things unpleasant for people who have a legitimate right to be here."
